Word Forge Books Announces Publication of “Mission: Murder,” First Title in Betty Kerr Orlemann’s New Hattie Farwell Mystery Series

Ferndale, Pa. – Independent publisher Word Forge Books is pleased to announce the publication of “Mission: Murder,” the first title in its Hattie Farwell mystery series. The series is penned by author Betty Kerr Orlemann, a resident of Tinicum Township. Orlemann created octogenarian and amateur sleuth Hattie Farwell, and Hattie’s faithful sidekick, Wolf, her huge dog. Hattie is the heroine in her series of “cozy” mysteries, which are set in Bucks County, Pennsylvania. The books are being offered under the publisher’s ShadowDance Press imprint.

“We’re very excited to be able to offer ‘Mission: Murder’ to readers looking for a new character in the mystery genre,” says publisher Mary Shafer. “We’re committed to bringing fresh, local voices to the attention of readers the world over, and Betty’s books will enhance our regional list. We believe her Hattie Farwell series will appeal to a broad range of readers, especially anyone who’s familiar with and fond of our beautiful Bucks County settings.”

Orlemann is a familiar face in the Delaware Valley, as founder of the Friends of the Delaware Canal and a longtime contributor to several area newspapers and magazines.

“Mission: Murder” is available through local bookstores and other fine retailers, as well as direct from the publisher at wordforgebooks.com.
